Professor

Acting Head of Department

Research Interests

Laser photochemistry and radiation chemistry; laser deposition; polymer surface modification.

The field of Professor Hiraoka's current research is the laser-induced modification of electronic materials. His overall objectives are first to understand the basic science involved when these materials are exposed to UV light or pulsed laser beams under various conditions and, second, to explore the potential for new applications for these materials.

More specifically, Professor Hiraoka's research focuses on four closely related topics: i) selective laser-induced deposition; ii) basic studies of lithographic resist materials; iii) laser, plasma and ion beam reactions/etching of organic materials; and iv) surface and interfacial studies, including surface modification of organic materials.

Representative Publications

"Pulsed UV-laser Deposition on Sub-0.25  $\mu$ m Periodic Structures" J. Photopolymer Science & Technology, 8, 657-664 (1995).

"Sub-Quarter Micron Periodic Patterns with Nd:YAG Laser and Images Transfer to Silicon Surface by Reactive Ion Etching" Jpn. J. Appl. Phys., 33, 6187-6184 (1994).

"Interfacial Study on Laser-Induced Material Transfer from Polymer and Quartz Surfaces" Appl. Surface Sci., 7, 183-194 (1994).

"Deposition of diamond-like carbon films via excimer laser ablation of polybutadiene" Materials Sci & Eng., B39 228-231 (1996).

"Irradiation of solid  $C_{60}$  films with pulsed UV-laser-light: Fabrication of a periodic submicron  $C_{60}$  structure and transformation of  $C_{60}$  into a different carbon phase" Appl. Phys. A63, 305-314 (1996).

UC DAVIS HEALTH SYSTEM

COMBINATORIAL CHEMISTRY: A PROMISING NEW APPROACH

UC Davis Cancer Center's expertise in clinical care is rapidly being matched in the research laboratory. Promising new collaborations and approaches to drug development, such as our association with Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and the use of combinatorial chemistry to rapidly screen potential anticancer agents, offer tremendous hope for producing more potent, more specific and less toxic therapies in the 21st century.

The era of cancer chemotherapy began in the 1940s with the discovery that nitrogen mustard could shrink tumors. That set off an intensive search for other chemical bullets. Over the next half-century, a small army of researchers at the National Cancer Institute acquired and screened more than two million compounds for possible anti-tumor activity, slogging through some 15,000 to 40,000 per year.

But a nascent field known as combinatorial chemistry is taking the drug development process to almost inconceivable new speeds. The new technology empowers a single laboratory, in less than a week, to screen more potential anticancer agents than the entire National Cancer Institute could in five decades. In the last six months alone, UC Davis medical oncologist Kit Lam has created and screened more than 100 million compounds for cancer-fighting properties.

Widely acknowledged as one of the world's foremost combinatorial chemists, Lam positions the UC Davis Cancer Center at the leading edge of this new science. While at the University of Arizona, Lam originated the "one-bead, one-compound" method of combinatorial chemistry, a triumph he described in the prestigious journal Nature in 1991. The one-bead, one-compound method is one of five combinatorial methods in widespread use in the field today.

In conjunction with genomics and robotics, combinatorial chemistry is the engine that will convert advances in basic cancer research into practical new therapies in the 21st century.

"Combinatorial chemistry is one of the most important recent advances in medicinal chemistry," says Lam, who joined UC Davis in July 1999 as professor of internal medicine and chief of the Division of Hematology/Oncology. "There is reason to hope that it will produce more potent, more specific and less toxic anti-cancer agents in the foreseeable future."

No Matches

Sorry, no people match the phone search criteria you entered.

We recommend 2 options:

1. Try a USSearch (see box at right)
2. Try your search again (see tips below)

Search tips

Check for correct spelling in all search fields including City and State abbreviation.

Broaden your search by using fewer search fields.

Use the wildcard character ("*"). For example typing "D*" as your first name search criteria will return people whose first names begin with "D".

It is also possible that the person you are looking for does not have a phone listing in Yahoo! People Search.

Phone Search Results

No Matches

Sorry, no people match the phone search criteria you entered.

We recommend 2 options:

1. Try a USSearch(see box at right)
2. Try your search again (see tips below)

Search tips

Check for correct spelling in all search fields including City and State abbreviation.

Broaden your search by using fewer search fields.

Use the wildcard character ("*"). For example typing "D*" as your first name search criteria will return people whose first names begin with "D".

It is also possible that the person you are looking for does not have a phone listing in Yahoo! People Search.

(54) Title: TRIOXANE DERIVATIVES  (57) Abstract  This invention relates to compounds containing a trioxane moiety, especially certain artemisinin derivatives, which have cytotoxic and antitumour activity and their use in the treatment of cancer. Some of these compounds comprise a ligand which is capable of binding to a nucleic acid and a group containing a trioxane moiety which is capable of acting as source of free radicals which are capable of chemically interacting with a nucleic acid. Processes for the preparation of such compounds and pharmaceutical compositions containing such compounds are also provided.
